THE DAILY MEMPHIS AVALANCHE.

By Gallaway, Hampton & Co.) MEMPHIS, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1867. (Volume I ... Number 224

THE DAILY AVALANCHE

They are to have a theatrical season at Selma, to commence on the 5th of next month.

The tug W. R. Muir exploded her boiler at Port Huron, Wednesday night, by which six men were killed and five badly hurt.

The Southern Star is the title of a new paper just started in Tuscaloosa by W. S. Sickles & Co. It will avoid politics altogether.

Should not Sheridan be under lively obligations to President Johnson for removing him from so dangerous a proximity to disease?

When Andy Johnson shows the possibility of maintaining political life by the slow current with which he glides, we shall believe in the theory of vivi-section.

The City Council of Selma has passed an ordinance prohibiting lewd women from appearing upon the streets after ten o'clock at night, under penalty of arrest and imprisonment or fine.

Major George H. Tracey, Superintendent of the Freedmen's Bureau, died at his residence, in Mobile, on the 18th instant, after a short ... later. He was quite a young man, and ... in the regular army.

The fall book trade sale ... comprising ... Tuesday. The sale this ... only a ... success; 900,000 volumes ... summer, and the amount ... troduced at $900,000.

The Vicksburg Times ... notice the ... that if the yellow fever ... ways now ... it will arrive by the railroad. That ... drop ... a certain quarantine project. There was one here that suddenly went under, at the current of the Mississippi in certain quarters is thought to be dangerous.

The Huntsville Democrat of the 20th says that the loyal league of that (Madison) county "is in a state of incurable dissension and likely to smash up." Similar accounts are received from Jackson, Marshall and Blount counties. It is said the Baptist Church is playing the very deuce with the leagues.

An Havana letter says the residence of Baron Magnus, the Prussian Minister, who has been lying in seclusion near San Louis Potosi, was broken into by order of Juarez, for the purpose of obtaining certain important documents which he was supposed to have in his possession. Nothing was found however. The Baron is supposed to be insane.

The United States Consul at Palermo, under date of August 30, writes that cholera had decreased so that there were only one hundred cases the previous day, and the city was assuming a cheerful aspect. Within a year there have been about ten thousand deaths, or five per cent. of the population of the city.

They had a spirited and confused meeting at Huntsville, Alabama, on Monday last, in which negroes and whites mutually participated in a town caucus to nominate delegates to the Constitutional Convention. There was a great deal of trouble, pro and con, but after a stormy session the gag law was imposed, and two blacks and one white were selected as delegates. It was thought that the "so called" white was the blacker of the two.

Bierstadt, the artist, offers his house at Irvington, on the Hudson, to rent at twelve hundred dollars per month, furnished. A New York paper says, "Some fool will come along and take it, we have no doubt." Of course. A fellow who, like Stewart, volunteered a million to the Federal Government to break down the Constitution, and make the glorious South subservient to a power which is hated and will not be obeyed—this fool, whosoever he may be, will be delighted to take such a place, provided he is loaded, and "having swallowed in the roll, can roll in the 'swallow.'"

A woman eighty years old has just been committed to the House of Correction at New Bedford, Massachusetts, for drunkenness. She was accompanied by another woman over sixty. That is Puritanical doctrine, and a similar rule drove out Roger Williams, and burned witches at Salem! Poor, old women! They might have had their "schnappe" without the ignominy of being sent to a place where the vilest abuses exist, and none come out clearer than they went in.

A man in Atlanta, Georgia, has invented a plan by which mails and passengers may be carried from that city to Washington in three hours, and the scientific men have seen it say it will work.—New Era.

We would like to believe that but can't, notwithstanding the "scientific men."—Mobile Tribune.

It is said that seeing is believing, but feeling is the naked truth. It is told of Sheridan (not King Philip) that on his notice being directed to the fact that a notorious miser had dropped a guinea into a contribution box, he confessed he saw it, but pertinaciously held out that he did not believe it.

Ross & Co., solicitors of patents, 309 Pine street, St. Louis, Missouri, officially reports to the AVALANCHE the following patents granted Kentucky and Virginia inventors for the week ending 10th September, 1867: W. Deering, Louisville, Kentucky, cotton and hay press. R. E. Miller, Louisville, Kentucky, attachment for breast collars. J. Schickel, Harrisonburg, Virginia, mill gearing. E. J. Leyburn, Lexington, Virginia, cupping instrument. J. W. Crockett, Newbern, Virginia, graduating accelerating cartridges for ordnance, etc. G. H. Weller, Alexandria, Virginia, composition for elastic hand stamps.

General Spear, acting Secretary of War of the Roberts Fenians, reports that the whole force of the Fenian Brigade numbers 9,800 enlisted men, with about 13,000 rifles, 16,500 accouterments, 130,000 rounds of ammunition; in addition, there were 100 rifles along the border, from St. Albans to Oswego, in the hands of private parties. At Sackett's Harbor about 2,000 stand of arms, and at Plattsburg Point about 1,200, at Oswego 119 rifles—in all about 20,000. In addition to this force, the Stephens wing claim to have 16,000 stand of arms, 15,000 sabers, a large lot of ammunition, and a vessel in New York harbor.

On Friday evening, at six o'clock, the well known Cruthfield House, in Chattanooga, was destroyed by fire. It appears that as a boy was preparing to light the house, he started from the lamp room with a tray full of kerosene lamps, all of which were lit. As he passed through the hall he accidentally fell, and the lamps breaking, the oil took fire, and in a few minutes the whole building was in flames. Every effort was made to save the house, but as there is no engine in the town the labors of the citizens were in vain. The buildings adjoining for a time were ... great danger, but were eventually saved. At the leaving of the train the loss had not been ascertained, but it can not vary far from seventy-five to one hundred thousand dollars.

The Pope and Victor Emanuel are co-operating actively in the suppression of revolutionary attempts against Rome. The one is trying to surpass the other in seizing "dangerous and suspected persons" on the Roman frontier, and the arrests that were made last week by the Pope's troops at Viterbo are only the counterpart of those that have been made at other points by the King's troops. Though it is certain that these two Sovereigns must take very different views of the character and work of Garibaldi, yet both unite to crush out the attempts at disturbance with which his name is now associated. If the Pope can hold on to his seat until the assembling of the General Council which he has called, he may then count on his safety being insured as long as it remains in session, for there is no doubt that France would combine with other Catholic powers to guarantee papal independence under such solemn circumstances as those of a General Council of the Church.

The most gloomy accounts reach us, says the Americus Citizen, from the counties of Southwestern Georgia, of the condition of the cotton crop. In consequence of the excessive rains the bolls of cotton bolls have either rotted or sprouted. This, added to the shedding of the forms, has caused at almost certainty that not one-half the quantity of cotton will be made that was anticipated a month ago. It is considered too late in the season for cotton not in bloom to mature before frost, and hence the crop must be almost a failure. This will be a ... calamity to the people of ... and all are interested in the prosperity of the ... plentiful.

The Columbus Index, of the 17th, has the following notice of Alcorn and his speech:

This gentleman delivered a speech at the Court house on Saturday, to a small audience of whites and blacks. Public sentiment and the weather were rather unfavorable to him. We have come up to report of his speech more than that there was a good deal of reconstruction, President Johnson, and General Alcorn, in it. It is a great day for Genaral Alcorn can't see the presidency of ... stamping now-a-days, and that he doesn't put the measure of talent God has given him to better use.

Colonel Cameron, of this city, made a meeting or two quite interesting by inviting the pendulous "general" to

"Dog the catchin on those recreant limbs."

If that isn't Shakespear, it is more like it than Alcorn is like a patriot or an orator.

In a recent speech, Ben Wade said: "I charge upon this great organized party (the Democratic) the responsibility of 300,000 of the flower of our youth lying in their graves." Commenting upon this the Chicago Times indulges in the following pungent criticism: "The difference between these 300,000 and Ben Wade is, that, while they lie in their graves, he lies out of it. It is a pity there is any difference whatever between them."

Why don't the blatherskite Ben Wade, under his help meet Dick Yates, for sending 30,000 Illinoisians to their graves, or catch Logan about the head, instead of the glory which they were told they would surely win? There is not a Democrat in the State of Illinois that should not have, with undying, implacable resentment the deluding scoundrels who lured them on with the false and flattering lies upon their lips.

A letter from near Brenham, Texas, to the Mobile Tribune, dated September 3, has the following sensible paragraph relative to expatriation: "The movement toward Brazil, Tuxpan, Honduras, etc., is pretty much at an end. Already many are returning, dissatisfied and disappointed, and after losing what little was left them at the break-up. Why any man in his senses would wish to leave Texas, I cannot understand; at all events with the hope of finding a better country in those named. As to moral reliability, that, too, will quickly find its level. Texas cannot, by any possibility, be anything but a white man's country. And such we intend to make it." A virtuous resolve, and one that will render Texas the most desirable place of abode in all the sunny regions of the South. The vast pampas of the Lone Star State, "where the hirsels are grazing," and the low of thousands of broad horned cattle may be heard amid the tinkling bells of different herds, afford the finest pasturage in all the Southern latitude. The grass springs up spontaneously, and "all the year round" makes sleek the sides of ruminating and "sweet-breathed kine," while the air is healthful and invigorating to the "monarch of all he surveys." During the present remarkable season, the fearful visitant, yellow fever, has been wafted to the interior and decimated the population, but with proper precautions this cannot again be the case, for people are never willing to be brave by paying for their own experience. When from Vera Cruz or Havana shiploads of fever are brought to Galveston, the most rigid embargo should be maintained to prevent the calamity from being spread through the surrounding country. In every respect Texas is all that is claimed for it, and is an empire in itself, flourishing, even when desolation was marking the progress of Federal arms through all the sisters of the Confederacy. It is a great State, and a grand destiny is involved in the development of its vast resources.

SATURDAY'S NOON DISPATCHES.

The Late Fenian Riot in Manchester.

Count Bismrck on the Salzburg Conference

To-Day the Revolution to Commence in Rome.

MANCHESTER, September 20.—Manchester has been quiet all night, but the police have been vigilant to prevent the escape of any of the rescued prisoners. All the avenues of exit have been closely watched during the night, and several persons supposed to be implicated in the riot have been arrested and held in their beds. It was reported early this morning that Kirby had been rescued, but it lacks confirmation. It is surprising how speedily the mob was dispersed and quiet restored after the rescue was effected. The outbreak having taken the Government by surprise, a strong force is being mustered to prevent further demonstrations. One policeman is reported to have died last night. It is impossible to tell how many lives were lost in the affray. Several persons were badly injured, and probably the dead were carried off by the mob. It is thought the mob had friends in jail who kept them informed of the movements of the police and prisoners.

DUBLIN, September 20.—Captain Osborne, one of the Fenian prisoners, made his escape from the jail at Clonmel last night and had not been recaptured up to noon, though the jail guards started in immediate pursuit. The police are searching every part of the surrounding country, where he is supposed to be still concealed.

MANCHESTER, September 20.—Everything is quiet here; the rioters appear to be satisfied with their success. There were no more disturbances. No traces have been discovered of the rescued prisoners. Kelly an Deasy have been discovered, and it is thought they will succeed in escaping from the city. The name of the policeman killed is Brett. Another policeman is seriously are William Allen and Michael Larkin, charged with murdering Brett.

LONDON, September 20.—An evening dispatch from Hereford reports that Kelly and Deasy were next to them day before yesterday, but the police failed to arrest them last night as supposed. Count Bismarck recently addressed a circular note to the diplomatic representatives of Russia in regard to the conference of Napoleon and France's assumption at Salzburg. The circular had not been published, and in the political organ of Gramont in English and continental papers. Bismarck tells Francis Wellington to accept the representations made by France, and that the conference at Salzburg ... and that the ... of the Emperor ... Rouher ... many allusions to the Count of the Bismarck Circular. London papers comment severely on the note, regarding it as ... Count Bismarck ... discussed to find little fault with what Bismarck says, denounces its circular, because in all its reference to Germany it pointedly ignored the treaty of ... ague, and omits all allusion to the obligation under which Prussia rests to fulfill the stipulations of the ... treaty.

PARIS, September 20.—As the day for the annual statement of the account of credit mobilier approaches, much disquietude is apparent on the bourse. The operations of the credit mobilier exercise a powerful influence on monetary affairs in France, consequently it keeps the public in condition to correspondingly great.

LONDON, September 20.—Preparations for party action in Italy, in the revolutionary movement on Rome are about complete. The day on which Victor Emanuel is to be made as the day on which the long deferred attempt is to be made.

LIVERPOOL, September 20.—p.m.—Cotton unchanged. Sales to-day, 12,000 bales. Manchester market buoyant. Breadstuffs dull and declining. Corn 27s. 6d. for new mixed Western. Provisions quiet. Pork 77s. 6d. Lard 69s. Tallow 47s. Petroleum 1s. 6d. Rosin 6s. Spirits Turpentine 34s. Resin 6s. Illinois Central 77; Erie 41½.

FRANKFORT, September 20.—p.m.—United States bonds 72¾.

NEW YORK, September 21.—A Times' special says General Grant has written a letter to General Sickles the latter was relieved, in which he expressed deep regret at the President's action, and unqualifiedly indorsed all the measures of General Sickles' administration, approving especially order No. 18, by which the people of South Carolina have been enabled to raise their crops this season.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 21.—Returns from forty-eight counties, partly official, give Haight 43,500, Gorham 31,760, and May 11,895. The returns of the vote for Congressman have been received from a few counties only. It is certain that only one political candidate is elected.

NEW YORK, September 21, 8 A.M.—Gold opened at 40¼ and has since advanced to 40.

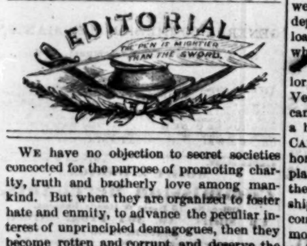
SUNDAY, : : : : : : : SEPTEMBER 22, 1867



We have no objection to secret societies concocted for the purpose of promoting charity, truth and brotherly love among mankind. But when they are organized to foster hate and enmity, to advance the peculiar interest of unprincipled demagogues, then they become rotten and corrupt, and deserve the opposition of every honest man. Know-Nothingism has been tried with its attendant train of religious proscription, dark mysteries and anti-Christian oaths. It was soon left to rot, as it were, on the public common, a putrid and reeking carcass, which all men instinctively avoid. But a still more filthy and stinking organization has sprouted out of the ruins of Know-Nothingism. We allude to that infamous organization called the Loyal League. It is now in full blast, and will continue in operation until the demagogues accomplish their mean and unworthy aspirations. Such a society in a republic is a grevious error in its very conception. It is at variance with all the aims, purposes and boasts of republican institutions. The very theory of a Republic—the foundation on which all free Governments rest—is the doctrine that the people have intelligence, sobriety and integrity sufficient to govern themselves, and sufficient to govern with more honesty, discretion and regard to public and private interests than are to be found under the forms of men who meet together at midnight and conspire in the dark against the wealth and intelligence of the country. The establishment of secret political societies is a plain declaration, in act, that the people cannot be trusted with self government; that they must be drilled, controlled, guided, inveigled, frightened, or deluded into a course prescribed by the leaders of a minority—whose deliberations are secret, and whose decisions are to be executed with blind obedience. Open discussion, frank consideration of both sides of a question, and publicity of action, are the characteristics of all good Governments, and essentially so of all free ones. In place of these excellences which have long constituted peculiarly the glory and the pride of the United States, secret societies would substitute darkness, concealment and arbitrary procedure. If truth and right are not always in the ascendant in the former case, their chances of success are not artificially impeded. In the latter event passion, prejudice and blind obedience to the dictates of a supreme, secret tribunal, are likely to be the principal influences brought into play. In the former case an error can be recognized and a mistake corrected; in the latter none but the chief of the initiated can see further than the outward act, and the result of previous secret commands. In free governments every man is entitled to a free voice, and to his due influence in determining the general action of his fellow citizens. A secret political society neutralizes this grand privilege of the free, and overrides all free action and free deliberation by a hidden combination, which too easily and too certainly degenerates into a conspiracy, at first against the free action, finally against the liberties of the citizens. There is a political propriety, as well as a religious significance, in the scriptural remark that "men loved darkness rather than light because their deeds were evil." If the principles of Republicanism are true, and are sought to be maintained, and if the objects contemplated by the secret organizations are just and proper, why should not the policy desired be candidly avowed, and fairly submitted to the judgment of the people? If a defeat of the proposed aims is apprehended, those aims should be renounced as either wrong in themselves, or as foreign to the sovereign will of the community. If they are still pressed by indirect means, the effort is a violation of all republican tendencies, it is a practical repudiation of republican government, and will eventuate in its overthrow. Grant that the objects originally contemplated by policicol secret societies are in themselves harmless, or laudable, or patriotic, the means taken to achieve them inflicts a more fatal wound than could result from all the injuries sought to be redressed. For one secret society will necessarily generate another; the devil must be fought with his own weapons, and fire resisted with fire. One secret organization planned for the attainment of one set of purposes will suggest and provoke another contrived to resist them. That party opposition which runs to such excess and at times creates such ruin and disturbance, even when exhibited in the broad day-light, subjected to all the restraints of public opinion, and liable to censure from the thunder tones of the masses—what would its action and its fruits become, when all its measures were contrived in secret, its deliberations yieled by an impenetrable mystery, and the responsibilities of its advocates annihilated by the darkness in which they had enshrouded themselves? Let the first secret societies be organised for real and not merely for plausible good—in a very short time themselves and their imitators would sink gradually downward from their first elevated aspirations, and victory, place, profit, honor, triumph, would be sought at all hasards, and by every method, without any scruples as to propriety. The whole frame work of society would thus be permeated by hidden streams of treacherous and unsuspected fires—the community would sleep upon a restless volcano, ever ready to spout forth its consuming fires to desolate and destroy the fabric which seemed on the surface so fair to the eye. Troubled convulsions in the bosom of society—violent throes agitating the mass, without showing themselves to the day, would, from time time, break out in a reign of terror—and alternating despotisms of conflicting parties would ultimately result in the despotism of a single tyrant, whose rule would be accepted as a welcome relief from the uncertainty, the oppression, and the tyranny of factions contending in secret, but wreaking their mutual vengeance openly.

"Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea!" We have good news to tell our readers. THEAKER, the insolent upstart, who disturbed the meeting at Iuka a few days since, has been relieved from the command which he disgraced. General ORD has given him notice to pack up his duds and travel to the far West, which seems to have been set apart as a kind of Botany Bay for military squirts, as SHERIDAN has been sent to the same region. Poor THEAKER! Alas for the mutability of human grandeur and the uncertainty of all earthly expectations. For two days his name blazed athwart the sky like a shooting meteor; but the bright light has been snuffed out by General ORD's thumb and forefinger, who, we understand, has pitched him out of his department with that kind of disgust and loathing which a pretty young lady exhibits when she takes hold with a long pair of tongs of the toad she finds sweltering in her parlor, and tosses it into the back yard. Verily, THEAKER went up like a rocket, but came down with all the poetical elegance of a bedraggle-tailed Shanghai from his stoop. CALIGULA erected a marble stable for his horse Incitatus, provided him with breast plates studded with diamonds and pearls, and then elevated him to the dignity of Consulship. Is not THEAKER worthy of as much consideration as a horse? Why should diamonds and pearls be lavished upon a beast and withheld from such a mass of beauty, love and purity as is concentrated in the charming THEAKER. The people of North Mississippi are deeply grieved at the bare idea of losing this promising son of Mars. The separation will be affecting as that between AUGUSTUS and AGRIPPA; but THEAKER will ever be held in blissful remembrance. We trust that he will send us a lock of his beautiful carroty hair. Farewell, THEAKER. If you are determined to go, go along! A few days sooner or later will make no difference.

"Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once."

Governor Patton has been speaking at Huntsville, and the Democrat says the much larger portion of his audience were negroes, to whom he gave good advice. He paid a side compliment to the senior editor of this paper, which was so utterly at variance from his established reputation, that the miserable weakling who claims to be Governor, must have felt himself less than a well bred nigger when he uttered it. The Huntsville Democrat settles this part of the Governor's speech, without the necessity of a word from us, for it distinctly charges him with varying from history. The Governor is growing weaker every day, and to gratify the petulance and malignity of years' growth, he forgets that first attributes of the gentleman—a due regard for truth. There is one part of his speech that we are willing to indorse, because it does contain truth, a rara avis in its general surroundings. It might be read with advantage in this meridian. The Democrat says: "When we arrived he was impressing on them the fact that the God of Nature had made them black, and no human law could make them white or the social equals of the whites—that there are thirty thousand more white men than black men in Alabama, and hence the blacks could not have superior physical power to enforce equality. He exhorted the blacks not to believe those who told them that the interests of the whites and those of the blacks are antagonistic, but to be assured that they are identical, and when the wheel of fortune of the whites goes up, the black's goes up, and when down the black's goes down. When any one tells you that your Governor is opposed to your freedom add wants to re-enslave you, do you tell them it is not true. [Here the Governor is in direct conflict with the teaching of members of the Union, Republican or Radical party, with which he is acting, for some of them teach this falsehood to the negroes of this county and city, in their speeches, and they are circulating documents asserting it."]

News from Vancouver's Island states that a proposition is being freely discussed in the British metropolis for the transfer of the Islands to the United States, in liquidation of the claims growing out of the depredations of the Alabama. This news is very far fetched.

(Macon, Georgia, papers please copy.)

We enjoyed, in wine and cake, the heaven of bliss that lay in the future of this "happy, happy pair," but how far all apartments fell beneath the bliss we wished them! The fact is, nobody knows how much he loves, (provided he be a man), until he is married; and being so the face that grows older with years, is still lighted up with beauty, for the heart keeps pace with every evolution of joy.

Among the best we notice the Chimney Corner, Literary Album, Frank Leslie's Metropolitan Record, Sporting Times, Clipper, New York Ledger, Irish Republic, Irish People, Banner of Light, La Crosse Democrat, Boston Pilot, Ladies Friend, Peterson's Ladies' Magazine, Godey's, Harper's Monthly for October, Gehrman literary, and criminal papers, New York Weekly, and Harper's Weekly. A STERLING HOUSE.—It is with great pleasure that we see the cotton bales beginning to come in to our city. It reminds us of old times, and looks as if pleasant days were yet in store for us all. Our merchants like it also, and look more genial than they have for some time past. A fair amount of cotton will be consigned to the sterling house of Haller, Fisher & Co., cotton factors and commission merchants, No. 41 Madison street, Dunne Block, whose reputation for business capacity and integrity is well known in our community. Few houses men have more entirely won the confidence of their patrons, and few are more deserving of it. ARRIVALS.

Mr. M. Donnelly was yesterday admitted to the bar, and will practice law in our different courts.

The first bale of the year's crop of cotton in Shelby county, raised by W. D. McCallen, was consigned to the outside firm of S. M. Webb & Co.

The stones have now the change of the Watkins Hospital, and their finishing touches and beautification will add much to the embellishment of the institution.

A negro was struck badly with a brickbat on Jefferson street yesterday. He hurried to a police station and reported an affray, but they could only find and take into custody the brick with which he was struck. The person using it had got out of the way.

Another boat club is about being formed in Memphis. We are glad to see such healthful and manly sports flourishing. They take young men from worse amusements and worse associations.

The members of the bar, with scarce an exception, are in ecstasies at the appointment of Mr. Thorne Register of Bankruptcies. The appointment is purely political, and entirely unfit.

Yesterday the sun entered the equator and the consequent accompanying disturbance in the fluid zone indicated that wide awful disturbance whose echoes were visible here in a brisk wind, a falling of temperature and indications of rain.

On and after the 25th inst. a daily ... ommodation train between here and Brownsville, to run out on the Memphis and Ohio railroad. It will leave Brownsville at 5:30 a.m. and arrive here at 8:15 p.m., Nashville time, which is twenty minutes ahead of Memphis time.

The Bazaar—as the fashionable now ... before Advent very excited discussions in the Leagues over nominations. As the filling the offices is supposed to be all settled in these secret cabals, it seems necessary to go through with the farce of an election.

A slight mistake was made yesterday in reference to the yellow fever at Galveston. It was not fifteen deaths altogether that was intended to be stated, but one death in fifteen of those attacked by the disease.

The well known and reliable merchants Thomas H. Allen & Co., yesterday, received from the Acadia ... first sales of new crop cotton. This indicates, as we have already stated, that there will this year be a great increase of cotton coming to this port from Arkansas.

A new point of legal practice is to be argued in the municipal court to-morrow. One party, by his attorney, R. F. C. Brooks Esq., states that when said complainant or ... is placed by a defendant, the court may, in its discretion, require as a condition precedent bonds to secure the claim in litigation.

Coroner Cotton held an inquest yesterday upon the body of a colored man on President's island. He was killed by a negro whose wife he had enticed and whom he had taken from her husband. The husband left some two weeks ago but returned on last Friday, and finding his wife and her paramour living together, he killed the latter and then made his escape.

The following is the stationary report for the week, ending at twelve o'clock yesterday: Spasms, 2; diptheria, 1; bilious fever, 4; whooping cough, 1; injury of spine, 1; dysentery, 3; insanition, 1; debility, 3; choleric flux, 1; diarrhea, 2; congestion, 2; 41 ll born, 1; convulsions, 5. Males, 28; females, 25; adults, 19; children, 16; negroes, 2; whites, 17; total, 35.

W. K. ROGERS, M. D.,
Secretary Board of Health.

A malgamation Council, over the engine house, corner of Adams and Second streets had quite a lively time on Friday night. Richards and others made speeches to the pleasing delight of the importation of voting the Radical ticket, and the making of fuss b cause they won't get for five years a chance to hold office.

It is reported that Comptroller Lewis is favorable to the programme under which Dr. Lash is to ... removed from the County Hospital, under the absurd charge that the ... addressing ... patients in the Hospital, he says "sister," while he speaks to the colored patients only as "Tom," "Bill," "you," and the like.

As an indication of improving prospects of trade, we notice that a new firm with the style of Foster, Kealhoffer & Co., is about to be located at number 329 Main street. A great stock of groceries and ot her goods, purchased on reasonable terms, will be here in a few days and offered by this new firm, which is composed of as excellent young men as Memphis can produce. Gallant and true to the South during the war, they have long been known as men of ability, enterprise and the highest moral character.

Last night the new Memphis theater was brilliantly lighted and thrown open to the inspection and admiration of friends. It has been thoroughly refitted and most beautifully decorated. The scenery is new, the galleries and boxes have been repainted, and the arrangements altogether are magnificent. Mr. Thompson has done his best, that the season may open brilliantly. He deserves well of our people for his exertions in their behalf, and we hope he may meet with unprecedented success.

After a prolonged hearing of their case, deputy constables Sullivan and Lynch have been, by habeas corpus, released from custody, as they produced a great number of witnesses to sh, w that at the time of the alleged robbery they were not near the place, but were, during the whole forenoon, in attendance at the magistrate's court on the corner of Jefferson and second streets. The exoneration of the accused from the serious charges against them has been largely due to the ability and perseverance of Mr. Robinson, their counsel.

Etherly, the Mack who is under arrest on suspicion of having killed Dr. Ramsey, is said to have admitted to the detective who made the arrest, that he killed Ramsey, or that he half of it did so; but such admissions cannot be admitted in evidence, since Etherly was in irons at the time they were made. The only evidence thus far is that Hill, who has been charged with robberty in other cases, says Etherly said he had done so. Such hearsay evidence don't amount to shucks. The parties for whom Etherly have been working, regard him as a hard working, plain, honest fellow, and came into the city on Friday to collect two thousand dollars for the defense, but one of our attorney's generously offered to defend Etherly gratuitously. Hill's general character induces a suspicion that he may have been himself concerned in the murder.

A gent—man passing by the Greenlaw block yesterday morning saw assembled in front of the building three or four hundred negroes, young and old, men and women, white men, and his first impression was that there was an insurrection in the city, but on inquiry he learned that there was an election for magistrate going on. The gentleman seeing two negro men who were formerly in his employ on his farm ten miles from town, asked them what they were doing there. They answered that they understood there was an election to-day, and came into town to vote, but they were unable to find the place where they must put their tickets in—they understood that it was in a box. There was a postoffice box fastened to a lamp post a few feet distant, and the gentleman remarked to them that there was a box in which they could put their tickets. The freedmen commenced putting their tickets in through the postoffice box, and continued until the ... ticket was ... ...

Written for the Sunday Avalanche.]

MAXIMILIAN.

BY MRS. L. V. BROWN.

Maximilian sleeps forever
Beneath the silent sod,
His God like form reposes
Where tyrant feet have trod.
The last heart throb is over,
The great disc'vered soul
Among the blest in glory,
Has reached its final goal.

The midnight wind is sighing
Around thy dreamless form,
But angel hands have anchored
The spirit from life's storm.
The night queen sadly lingers
To kiss the crumbling clay,
And heavenly tears are falling
To wash man's crime away.

Beyond the vast blue waters,
Like Noah's weary dove,
A mangled heart is pleading
For quiet rest above.
"Poor Carlotta," quivering,
Chimed as from vesper bells,
And each vibration echos
So many sad farewells.

We weep for thy great anguish;
We know a treasure heart
Is God's best gift to woman—
To love her fatal lot.
To worship wildly, madly,
Is woman's sphere alone;
An idol, next to heaven,
Her more than monarch's throne.

The traitor wretch that bartered
The casket's gem away,
Lives on a blight to nature,
A withering curse for aye.
Like branded Cain he wanders
Beneath the smiting rod,
A loathsome reptile soiling,
Abhorred by man and God!

FLORENCE, September 9, 1867.

For the Avalanche.]

TO ONE WHO WILL UNDERSTAND.

Turn not in scorn from this my offering,
Or lightly view the musings of my pen;
Much richer gift than this to thee I'd bring,
If I could weave the wreath with subtler ken.

Soon should the lofty shaft inscribed to thee,
Onward thy name uplift, and keep it there,
Like some sweet lay emblazed in minstrelsy—
In oft repeated echoes buoyed in air.

Zephyrs should breathe around thee all their sweets,
Zeal should not weary in its offices;
If I could gather all the recipients,
Each honor should bring thee something new to please.

When I behold thee, like some beauteous fay
Of Elfin-land, new lighted on the earth;
Or some new Venus risen from the spray,
Deep in my heart a secret flame had birth.

Rayless were day to me—no light starred o'er
Upon my future, if thy smile be lost;
For life's great earnest hope, to make thee mine,
Forsoks all other thought—that uppermost;

Oh! like a "star" first I loved thee well,
For then he [illegible]ld me "brother," and I knew
Not then, tha[illegible], as now, thy bosom's swell,
In burning lava-streams, would flow to you.

DU-ROSE.

A HUMOROUS ARTICLE.

The Mingling of Humor and Sarcasm.

Two Amnesty Proclamations.

From the Mobile Times.]

The Sultan of Turkey has granted an amnesty to the Cretans. The enmity that exists between Turk and Cretan, between Mahometan and Eastern Christian is imbittered by the contests of a thousand years. The fanatical hatred for the infidel in the middle ages, which as Gibbon expresses it, precipitated Western Europe upon the shores of Asia, passed away from the minds of Western nations, with the extinction of all danger to their institutions from the encroachments of a great Mahomedan power.

The fire of hatred still burns as brightly as ever in the breast of the Eastern Christian. The religion that it will sigh eradicated his own from the provinces of Asia Minor and the valley of the Nile; that planted the crescent above the cross of St. Sophia at his capital of Constantinople, still flaunts its emblems in his face. At every street corner Christian meets Infidel—the unclean dog and the child of the devil—there is an Alpine chasm of hatred between them; for the Turk too is human, and knows how to hate the enemy of his religion.

"Young Giaur,
I know thee not, I loath thy face.
. . . . . .
Though bent on earth thine evil eye,
As mortal it hath glanced for,
Right well I view and deem thee one,
Whom Christ's stone should slay or shun."

Such is the Mahometan's hatred for his Christian neighbor. It is very natural, so natural that we make no doubt the reigning Sultan of Turkey shares it with the lowest begger among his subject. Yet this Sultan, this fellow with a hugh turban and enormous unmentionables—this abhorer of pork, be it from Cincinnati or elsewhere; this kisser of Kaaba stones and reader of Korans; this son of a hundred mothers and keeper of harems; this man who never heard of the New York Tribune, nor the spinning wheel of Horace Greeley's mother—this Grand Turk of a fellow perpetrates an act of statesmanship and generosity that ought to bring a blush even to the hard cheeks of Radicalism. He extends a general amnesty to revolted subjects—real subjects, conquered by his ancestors; not men of his race and religion, the inheritors with him of a glorious past, but the enemies of all that he holds dear and sacred. Fortunately for them there were no Yankee Radicals to swarm around him with loud bellowings, threatening impeachment and imprisonment. If there are any Turkish Butlers, Stevenses and Brookys, they are where, for the good of the world, they ought to be—under the feet of a master.

We leave the reader to decide which stands the better chance of getting to heaven—the Mahommedan Sultan who has forgiven his enemies, or the so-called Christian Radicals who persist in persecuting their countrymen.

"JOHN BROWN," THE REPUTED LOVER OF THE QUEEN.

The Latest Reports About Him.

Referring to the Queen's visit to Floors Castle, the Edinburgh correspondent of the Inverness Advertiser says:

It was observed on several occasions that John appeared somewhat officious in the discharge of his duty toward Her Majesty. For instance, when the royal train arrived at Kelso, John was the first to approach the carriage which contained the Queen, and, but for the intervention of the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe, the Duke of Buccleuch, and other distinguished company on the platform, the stalwart Highlander would have conducted his sovereign across the platform and through the triumphal arch to the royal carriage at the outside of the railroad station. This he was prevented from doing by the Duchess of Roxburghe, who all but pressed him to one side in order to approach the Queen on alighting from the royal saloon. John, who was dressed in full highland costume, seemed immensely proud of his position; and it was certainly amusing in the extreme to see him now and again, with a broad grin, bowing his acknowledgements for the cheers raised for her Majesty, some of which he probably thought were intended for himself. On the occasion of the visit to Melrose, John accompanied the royal visitors into the abbey, and seemed anxious to obtain a good view of the architectural beauties with which it abounds. On returning to the carriage, in advance of the Queen, he found that his Balmoral bonnet had fallen from the back seat over to that which her Majesty was again about to occupy; he lifted it up with the point of Her Majesty's parasol, then took off the Queen's black shawl, and then threw it over him, and on her Majesty again reaching the carriage he assisted her into her seat, and placed the shawl over her shoulders with great care. "Welcome to the Borders—John Brown," and "God save the Queen—John Brown," were the words, which, surrounded with floral decorations, were displayed over a shop in one of the principal streets in Kelso. They were words that astonished many of the passers-by. But the simple explanation of the matter is this—that the John Brown whose name was painted under the motto was no other than the decent man who kept the shop, and who never dreamt of a joke when he surrounded his signboard with these words of welcome and good will towards his Sovereign."

WE will at once rebuild our warehouse, and will have it completed by the 15th of September, but by the first day of that month we will be prepared to receive goods.

The sheds will be divided into five parts of compartments by brick walls, and covered with tin. Those who have patronized us for the last two seasons, and those who may favor us, need to do so the approaching one, may rest assured we will be ready for them.

We design establishing a Cotton Compress in connection with our warehouse, upon a adjacent lot, which will be ready by 1st of October or sooner. The proximity of our establishment to the railroad renders the handling of cotton so convenient that we can transfer cotton for shipment by river from or dray, at a less charge than it is moved from the warehouse, while all cotton in our warehouse for compressment there can be two drayages saved, hence it is evident that it will be to benefit it from our shed to the Compress as to turn it out in the ordinary way for transfer or dray.
